More and more students are going online for their course material, and for good reason. Online learning is easier to schedule, more flexible and allows you to access the content anywhere, making online studies both efficient and convenient. According to a study done by Harvard University's InnovationLab, one of the top reasons why millennials decided to do their online courses was because of their convenience. They believe that "online learning could be more convenient and flexible for them than traditional classroom formats" (Harvard InnovationLab). This becomes even more important for our students because many students don't have consistent access to their school's library, which is why they use more of an electronic format. These two concerns, of course, lead to them doing most of their learning online, and for some, this can be a struggle at first. However, this isn't a struggle that we can help you with. The following steps will help you start and finish your online courses effectively and efficiently, and will leave you with a good understanding of how online f988f36e3a
